

MURDOCH HELPED BY KEARNS' ABUSE

Tribune's Attack of Republican Candidate's Record Is Making Him Friends.

"Mr. Murdoch by his course in the council the past two years has shown what he would do as mayor in this city," says the Kearns organ in assailing the man who has done more than any other to block the systematic grafting on the part of the present city administration. In calling attention to this statement, a former American party worker remarked yesterday that the Tribune had in those few words stated the reason why he and hundreds of former members of the American party were going to vote for James D. Murdoch this year.

"The attacks on Murdoch's record as councilman are making votes for him every day among the progressive business men of Salt Lake, who are realizing more than ever that if Salt Lake continues to grow and public improvements keep pace with the business growth of the city, the taxes must be spent in a business-like manner," said this man, who was prominent among the Kearns workers in the last two campaigns.

"I don't hesitate to say that I am in favor of what the American party pretends to stand for, but because I was one of the most ardent supporters of the proposition to build an intercepting sewer, do you suppose I have to be in favor of paying Pat Moran $20,000 for patching that wooden stove pipe, which was to cost only $18,000 in the first place?"

Paying for Patches.
Then there was the Cottonwood conduit. I was influential in a small way in stirring up sentiment in favor of this addition to the water supply, and favored the building of the conduit. When it came to paying Moran thousands of dollars extra for patching up the defective pipe he was trying to foist on the city, it was another matter. Talk about Murdoch's voting 'no,' I'll bet a hot Jim would have voted 'no' on that proposition so you could have heard him up to Second South street, although he would have favored the conduit from the start.

"Just because a man is in favor of public improvements, the present gang in power seem to think he must favor graft methods in doing that work."

"Did you ever hear of a business man who systematically bunched all his contracts so that only one man could possibly bid on them, when by dividing them up a bit he might get competitive bids from a dozen men on each part?"

"This is the position the American party has taken on all public work, and because Murdoch promises to procure real competition in public work, he is dubbed a 'mossback' and a 'reactionary' by the gang now in control. If Salt Lake would put a few more men like Murdoch at the head of its departments, Salt Lake would have twice as many improvements for the same money."

PULL THE THIRD LEVER

Republican Ticket Is Third on the Voting Machine at the Coming Election.

There is only one way to defeat the American party next Tuesday, and that will be for the voters of Salt Lake who are in favor of public improvements, minus graft, to pull the third lever on the voting machine and then register as the keys stand.

Nominally there are four tickets in the field, and the Americans have put theirs at the top. The Socialists, who may poll 450 votes in the city, come second, and then comes the Republican ticket in third place, with the Democratic ticket at the bottom.

Complete and careful canvasses of the city show that Murdoch will win for mayor by anywhere from 2,500 to 5,000. Bransford comes next, and the Democrats and Socialists will have to fight for last place.

POLITICAL POINTERS.

Under the reorganization of the city council which will be effected the first week in January, no councilman will draw extra money from the city treasury for his work on the water committee. Incidentally there will be another innovation in the water committee when bids are asked for supplies.

Speaking of errors in instructing voters where to register, the Kearns organ discovered that in sending out 7,000 notices covered from Republican headquarters one of the clerks gave the wrong addresses to two voters. Cards sent out by the American party organization to more than 100 voters in the Fifth and Sixth wards, however, showed that their place of registration was in the Deseret National Bank building.

when the place of registration was at the Republican office. Rep. Tribune kindly charged the two errors on the part of the Republicans to "dirty politics," but of course the lot of more mistakes on the part of the Americans were clerical errors, inasmuch as J. E. Darmer, in charge of the work at American headquarters, is a poor office manager at $1,000 a month.

No wonder the Americans call the councilman from the First precinct a "reactionary" when James D. Murdoch alone was responsible for blocking the little gift of about $30,000 which Mayor J. S. Bransford and the city council had planned to hand Pat Moran for patching the $18,000 wooden stove pipe. This sort of reaction proved detrimental to the American party campaign fund, as well as to the finances of some of Moran's personal friends.

"Well, I guess I'll have to go down and see what my councilman is going to do," said Pat Moran, when his bill for $30,000 came up the last time. Pat found out a few minutes later that James D. Murdoch had won against the whole array of Americans, including F. S. Peniston, and what Pat said then will live only in the memory of those who heard him. "He didn't say 'piffle' either."

"Whenever a citizen of Salt Lake who is not on the city payroll or is not working for Tom Kearns attends an American party rally, I notice the party organs regard it as worthy of special note," said a prominent Republican yesterday. "I notice the party organs regard it as worthy of special note."

"I heard you had closed up shop," said a member of the Democratic city committee who dropped in at the Republican headquarters yesterday. "This Democrat saw a force of 45 clerks who, under the direction of Chairman F. C. Lofthouse and his assistants, were working on the next vigorous municipal campaign ever conducted by the Republican party in Utah."

Benny Rives, American candidate for city recorder, worked for nearly a week trying to bring about the omission of the fusion candidates for council from the official ballot and, when he failed, he naively said he wanted to play fair all the time.

E. G. O'Donnell, the American party councilman who has been on the little waterways committee graft of $3 a day, is spending some of his hard-earned coin in the Second precinct in the form of a bribe to the voters of the ward which has already turned the balance in favor of John Elkan and W. E. Vigus. About the only impression O'Donnell is able to make on the voters of the ward, however, is to leave an odor of gasoline smoke in his wake and a remembrance of his failure to promote the stockade and his failure to look after the interests of anyone living west of West Temple street.

Abandoning their fight for the councilman ticket in every precinct excepting the Fifth, the American party managers yesterday revised their payroll and cut off every district chairman from his $25 a day until next Monday. They were informed, however, that they might see their individual candidates for the council regarding pay for their work Saturday and Sunday, and the city committee would consider the proposition of paying them for Monday and election day.

Sanpete Armstrong's prediction that the American party would land third in the race is not accepted by all of the Kearns workers. They point to the prophecy of their city committeeman last year that they would win the county hands down, and say that proves that some of Sanpete Armstrong's predictions sometimes go wrong—especially if they are made after 6 o'clock in the evening.

WATERWAYS COMMISSIONERS RETURN

The United States waterways commissioners who returned in advance of the rest of the party, from a two months' inspection of the waterways of Europe. From right to left they are: Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire, Congressman Dais of Pittsburgh district, and Senator Simmons of North Carolina. Acting as spokesman for his companions, Senator Gallinger refused to discuss the commission's conclusions, but stated that they had been much impressed.

"We shall assemble in Washington prior to the opening of congress," he said, "and make up our report. We found vast penetrating rivers of Germany, Italy, France and Sweden. In Austria, Greece, and the United States, the river is looked after. It has been proven that water transportation is cheaper and sometimes swifter than the railroads. If we improve our rivers in the west, they will help our fortunes in the east. A ship subsidy bill of some character will be passed the forthcoming winter. Congress either will attempt to restore our flag or we might as well quit doing business in South America, in China, Japan and in the countries just beyond us on the Atlantic."

the affair, and the city chairman wants to keep the present arrangement of the third lever to the right. A compromise is expected, however, and in any event there will be a good time in store for every Republican worker who attends.

Many callers at Republican headquarters in the Dooly block yesterday tried the voting machine by turning the third lever to the right. Only four tickets are on the machines this year—the Republican, American, Socialist and Democratic—and those who stand for a decent, businesslike administration will vote the straight Republican ticket as the only sure means of doing away with the misrule of the American party.

Arrangements for the Scandinavian Republican rally at Odell hall were practically completed last night. The rally will be under the direction of Judge C. M. Nielsen, who will deliver an address. The other speakers will be Parley Jensen, C. V. Anderson, and James D. Murdoch, Republican candidate for mayor. An orchestra has been engaged to furnish music for the dancing after the program of speeches.

Waterproof Mulvey Needs a Bungstarter to Loosen Tap on His Rhetoric.

An American rally, at which a handful of colored voters and others were present, was held last night at the African Methodist Episcopal church, 211 East Sixth South street. The only speech to arouse the slightest degree of enthusiasm was that delivered by Archie Bradford, colored. The other American speakers were John S. Bransford, J. W. Kinney and Martin E. Mulvey.

When Waterproof Mulvey, rotund and timorous, arose to say his little piece, he appeared nervous and ill at ease. His condition of mind was not relieved when, in reaching for the accustomed footstool, he found it was not there. His mental distress was accentuated by a poignant degree as he vainly tried to find a resting place on the bar for his dimpled arm. Again he discovered that something was missing. Gazing around he saw unfamiliar signs on the wall. Finally, it dawned on him, not in a flash, however, but rather in a flush, for his moon-like countenance became rosy red, that he was in a church and that he was a stranger there.

What became of his carefully prepared little speech? That's what the colored people present would like to know. After aimlessly juggling together here and there, smiles, metaphors and comparisons in his private office in one of his thirteenth parlor, he was not at home in a pulpit and that the pews which faced him were as unfamiliar as the signs on the wall.

Bouquet is Withed.
Whatever the reason, his choice bouquet of language, which he had so carefully called from the gardens of rhetoric, became withered and dead before he had a chance to scatter them broadcast among the audience.

His speech, however, was a masterpiece. It was so different to the ordinary political speeches that he had heard that those who had come out to hear him in his new role. He established a reputation among the colored people as the champion excuse maker of the campaign.

After having been billed all over the city as one of the two principal speakers at the meeting, he began his little recitation by saying: "I didn't come here to make a speech; I just came here to make a visit."

Struggling desperately to start the flow of rhetoric, which he hoped would win for him colored votes, he finally managed to utter this outburst of eloquence: "Really, I wish to be excused from talking on the political or the political issues."

And then as an excuse for not speaking on the political issues, he said: "You see, I am a little skeptical about politics discussed in a church. So if you'll excuse me, I'll give way to the others."

Several of the speakers billed to appear at the meeting failed to show up. Among these was J. E. Darmer, chairman of the American city committee.

AMERICAN CANDIDATE'S STORIES AMUSE MANY
Politicians Laugh When Benny Rives Tries to Escape Criticism for Dirty Politics.

Benny Rives, American party candidate for city recorder, is amusing the politicians of all parties by his attempts to escape responsibility for the attempt at dirty politics in which he and the American city committee tried to force City Recorder J. B. Moreton to leave the name of the fusion candidates for the city council off the official ballots.

Rives has been in favor of the move from the start, and he has been most active in the attempt to have the names left off the ballots, which finally failed through the insistence of Moreton for a square deal. It was Rives who sought out the members of the city committee and disclosed to them the alleged "irregularities," and through Rives the matter was called to the attention of the city attorney, who in no one would give credit for enough intelligence to discover an excuse for such a plan.

J. E. Darmer, who is running the American party campaign for $1,500 a month, knows the weight of his candidate for city recorder, and the inner circle knows that Rives can be depended upon to stand hitched to the Kearns cart in any position he is placed. These qualifications are what placed Benny Rives in the field as the administration candidate for city recorder, and the hankering after another term on the part of J. B. Moreton aroused the ire of the city recorder, who in no one would give credit for enough intelligence to discover an excuse for such a plan.

SHOOTS THE HUSBAND WHO HAD SCORNE HER

Mrs. Abraham Levy of Chicago Uses a Pistol in a Fit of Desperation.

Chicago, Oct. 28.—Two hours after she had caused the arrest of her husband, Abraham Levy, a tailor, on a charge of abandonment, Mrs. Esther Levy visited the cell room of the Harrison street police station today and, before the startled lockup keeper had a chance to interfere, shot through the bars at Levy, inflicting a fatal wound.

In the building at the time were a score or more of policemen. Mrs. Levy stood in the corridor of the cage talking in a low voice to the prisoner, who remained locked in his cell. Suddenly she drew the revolver which had been concealed beneath her jacket, and fired.

A prisoner who occupied the cell with Levy said that Mrs. Levy betrayed no excitement in conversing with Levy. "Are you coming back to me and the children?" asked the visitor.

"No," answered Levy, "you put me here and here I will remain. You tell your story to the judge."

Mrs. Levy then shot her husband. She was taken to the woman's annex of the station, where she became hysterical.

When Mrs. Levy obtained the warrant for her husband's arrest she had charged Levy with neglecting his law for the other women and she had to work as a saleswoman to support their four children.

Night Riders Given a Warm Reception at the Home of George Kreitz.
